THE EVENING DISPATCH.

PROVO CITY, - SEPT. 17, 1896

NEATLY printed on a pretty card the words, "Congratulations to Baby Roy Marwick, Born 10:40 p. m., September 16, 1896," greeted the eyes of the local scribe of THE DISPATCH as he sat down to his desk after a round of the town this morning. The stated name of the child, the genial John, cashier of the Swasey & Martin bank, "did the honors" right liberally. Cigars and aqua matita of the best brands were ours at his expense. Here's to you, John. May the new man live long and prosper and continue to always bring joy to the home as he is now doing.

MILT SCOTT of the American Fork team perpetrates the following, evidently for a joke: "Elijah Bailey is authority for the statement that J. A. Thomas of Lehi has dropped as a democrat to a republican. If this be true, it will make the reps. schmyle." Mr. Thomas wants to know where the fun comes in. If Mil't will tell him, he will "schmyle" too. If it's not a joke, what is it? Mr. Thomas was in this office today and made very positive assertion that it is not truth. He says he hasn't dropped nor is he at all likely to drop. He's not of the flopping kind.

She Protested.

Mrs. Mary Smith Hayward of Chadron, treasurer of the Nebraska W. S. A. and one of the leading merchants west of Omaha, made a spirited protest this year against paying her taxes. It was addressed to the county treasurer and set forth that she was a person and entitled to protection in her rights, basing her claim on sections 1 of articles 14 and 15 of the constitution of the United States and on the bill of rights of the constitution of Nebraska.

Care of the Feet.

"Triply" has started women on a fresh crusade in the care of their feet. It gives a "black eye" to tight shoes. If the foot is to be beautiful, bare, the shoe must be loose (as Triply knew). The one thing that can keep the feet perfectly soft, the skin all over them like a baby's, is oil. Cocoa oil is the best for them, and they should be rubbed with it every day. The result adds greatly to comfort as well as to beauty.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

"INDUCEMENTS" TO RETAILERS.

Goods and Valuable Articles Given For the Price of the Goods.

"Something will have to be done to discourage 'inducements' to retailers, declared a wholesale grocer. 'A good pure food law could do some good. These inducements move the cupidity of the retailer, and the consumer suffers by having imposed upon him inferior or adulterated goods.'

"What do you mean by induce ments?"

The grocer handed to the inquirer a handsomely illustrated card on which were the words:

"Free with 500 pieces of Jollypop's (that's not the name) chewing gum, the handsome full gilt clock here pictured at a cost to the retailer of $8—that is, you get $5 worth of gum at retail and a $3 clock all for $4."

"If two manufacturers stopped at chewing gum, the demoralization of the trade would be slight, but this got something for nothing idea is stimulated all along the line. It is bad enough in various lines of tobacco, but in the line of ground spices and coffee it is absolutely pernicious. It's a lucky consumer that gets any genuine ground spices now, or any goods that may be cheapened by mixing. Mustard is mixed with sawdust and made hot in the month by the addition of cayenne pepper. So it is with other things.

"Here's a catalogue of a manufacturer who unblushingly labels his book 'absolutely pure spices.' There are about 150 different articles named in it as prizes to grocers who buy these spices in greater or less quantity. Among the inducements are musical boxes, firearms, furniture of all kinds, stoves, sewing machines, stove fixtures, show cases, clocks, cyclopedias, bicycles, baby carriages, lawn mowers, mackintoshes, crockery, rugs, silverware, watches and clocks, gold headed canes, umbrellas, and so on up to delivery wagons and two seated carriages. Here's the inducement in the last named:

"With 750 pounds ground spices, absolutely pure, any assortment of all spices, mustard, ginger, pepper, cloves, nutmeg, etc., at 25 cents a pound, we give one of these carriages free. It other words, 750 pounds of spices and the carriage all for $187.50."

"The drug trade is afflicted with this same sort of thing and perhaps to as great an extent as the grocery trade. There ought to be some way of heading it off."—Indianapolis News.

THACKERAY WAS ANGRY.

The Sailors Who Intended to Play a Trick Changed Their Minds.

Once upon a time the daughters of Thackeray saw a good man thoroughly and heartily angry—angry to the point of profanity. It was during their Italian journey, when they were returning to the ship in Genoa harbor after a day on the shore.

"We had to be on board at a certain time," Mrs. Ritchie says in her Macmillan paper, "so that we engaged a carriage and drove quickly to the quay, where the convicts, clanking in their chains, were still at work. A boat was found, rowed by some sailors, who certainly did not wear chains, but who were otherwise not very unlike those industrious convicts in appearance. The bargain was made, we all five entered the boat, and as we were getting in we could see our great ship in the twilight, looking bigger than ever, and one rocket and then another going off toward the dawning stars.

"They are signaling for us," said one of our companions. "We shall soon be on board."

"We had pulled some 20 strokes from the shore by this time when suddenly the boatmen left off rowing. They put down their oars, and one of them began talking volubly, though I could not understand what he said. 'What's to be done?' said one of the young men to my father. They say they won't go on unless we give them 50 francs more," and he began shaking his head and remonstrating in broken Italian. The boatmen paid no attention, shrugging their shoulders and waiting as if they were determined never to row another stroke. Then the steamer sent up two more rockets, which came through the twilight, bidding us hurry, and then suddenly my father rose up in the stern of the boat where he was sitting, and, standing tall and erect and in an angry such as I had never seen him in before or after in all my life, he shouted out in loud and impatient English, 'D—yon, go on!' a simple malediction which carried more force than all the Italian polysyllables and expositively tones of our companions. To our surprise and great relief, the men, seemed frightened; they took to their oars again and began to row, grumbling and muttering. When we got on board the ship, they told us it was a well known trick the Genoese boatmen were in the habit of playing upon travelers and that they would have sent a boat for us if we had delayed any longer."

A Step Forward.

The idea is being considered to unite all the women's clubs in Kentucky in a stock company for the erection of a handsome woman's building in Lexington. Only since last year, when the Kentucky Equal Rights association secured the new property laws, has such a project been possible in Kentucky. Women could have built the building before then, but they could not have held title. Now Kentucky women own their own buildings and their own pocketbooks too.

FINISHED POETRY

Patience Labor as Much as Pipe Frenzy • Patient In Its Production

There are yet some persons left who fancy that poetry is the product of a fine frenzy; that the poet genius awakes from a sublimated cataleptic trance to fill page after page with effortless beatitudes. A number of manuscript sheets of Longfellow's "Excelsior," which may be found in Harvard, should not only explode this theory, but give hope to many a discouraged amateur. As Longfellow first constructed the first verse of this poem it ran:

The shades of night were falling fast
As through an Alpine village passed
A youth who, as the peasants sung,
Responded in an unknown tongue.

This was manifestly weak, as the only obvious reason why the Alpine peasants sang was that they might afford a rhyme for the youth's response in an unknown tongue. A second trial at the verse, however, not only failed to improve it, but arranged it in such form that it is difficult to believe Longfellow guilty of the fault. The last two lines of the verse were made to read:

A youth who bore a woe of price.

A banner with the strange device.

There are not many, even among the magazine poets of today, who would consent to refer to a banner as "a pearl of price." But the poet had by this time three lines to his liking, and the substitution of "a youth who bore 'mid snow and ice'" completed the verse as it has been read and spoken throughout the length and breadth of the land, all of which goes to show that the genius of the poet is in the conception, and that the production of the poem, being quite another matter, lies solely in the direction of patient labor.—Chicago Herald.

Charmed by a Snake.

Snakes travel a good deal on their reputation. They scare birds and small animals so they become helpless. We know this to be a fact. And then when they get in a tight place with a man they try to run a bluff on him. A lawyer in our town once met a rattlesnake down in the Ozarks and began to experiment, or rather to let the snake experiment, to see if there was anything in the snake charming theory. He said that the snake's eyes got brighter and brighter, and his scales became glistening, and his body seemed to swell up a little thicker, and the whole outfit became so engrossing that he finally ran away from the snake in a dead scare and didn't get over it for a good while after. He told me that it was his belief that if he had kept company with that snake much longer he would have lost his wits.—Forest and Stream.

NERVE ENOUGH FOR ANYTHING.

A Boy Who Could Not Be Frightened by a Displaced Corpse or a Professor's Tricks.

Dr. McTavish of Edinburgh was some thing of a ventriloquist, and it befell that he wanted a lad to assist in the surgery who must necessarily be of strong nerves. He received several applications, and when telling a lad what his duties were, in order to test his nerves, he would say, while pointing to a grinning skeleton standing upright in a corner, "Part of your work would be to feed the skeleton there, and while you are here you may as well try to do so."

A few lads would consent to a trial of the doctor's test, but when they saw the skeleton, they would run away.

While they were pouring the hot mess into the skull the doctor would throw his voice so as to make it appear to proceed from the jaws of the bony customer and gurgle out, "Dr-r-r-gr-uh that's hot!"

This was too much, and without exception the lads dropped the basin and bolted. The doctor began to despair of ever getting a suitable helpmate until a small boy came and was given the gruel and spoon.

After the first spoonful the skeleton appeared to say, "Gr-r-r-uh-r-br, that's hot!"

Shoveling in the scalding gruel as fast as ever, the lad rapped the skull and impatiently retorted, "Well, blow it, can't you, yer old bony?"

The doctor drew in his chair and fairly roared, but when he came to his end of the lad on the spot.—London Tit-Bits.
